

BUCKEYE BUSINESS JOURNAL

ISSUE 4 — SATURDAY JUNE 17, 2023

MAN STEALS BACKHOE AND DRIVES TO AIRPORT TO CATCH FLIGHT

A Galbraith man has been charged with theft for allegedly stealing a backhoe to drive about 10 miles to the airport to catch a flight to Puerto Vallarta.

Security camera footage shows the Wiehe City man arriving at Veterans Airport atop a backhoe and leaving it in the airport parking lot Thursday, the Galbraith County Sheriffs Office said in a statement.

Footage captured the man walking across the street from the lot to the airport lobby, carrying a guitar case and a 12-pack of Mountain Dew Code Red.

The owner of the backhoe arrived at the airport a short time later and identified the equipment as belonging to his company. When asked what the machine is typically used for, company president Mike Leone said “well it’s a backhoe. It does backhoe things. Like lifting stuff and putting it back down somewhere else.”

A backhoe doing backhoe things. Like lifting stuff and putting it back down somewhere else

Puerto Vallarta is defined by the natural charm of its beaches embraced by the Sierra Madre mountains; its culture, gastronomy, and the warmth and hospitality of being welcomed like a friend.

THE LAST HOOAH?

Local NIMBY’s are at it again, seeking to ban chanting while marching in lines across the Buckeye State.

“It’s soooooooooo loud” said local resident Nathan Putridge. “I’m over here trying to focus on my D&D campaign and they’re all out there chanting and yelling and hollering and doing chants. They don’t even have the charisma rating to pull this off!”

Rumor has it the chanting will soon end with the conclusion of this session of Buckeye State Government, but some aren’t so sure.

“They come—they chant—they leave—they come—they chant—they leave” said Melissa Schmitt, local Symmes hall nurse/doctor. “We think they’re gone...BUT NO! 51 weeks later it’s back! It’s killing my property value!”

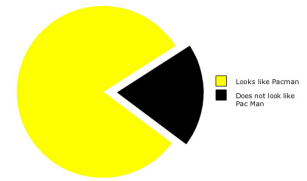

Offenders from a recent march across the capital ground yelling something that this reporter couldn’t make out amongst other people yelling for seemingly no reason.

The Aside

CHART OF THE DAY

Percentage of chart which looks like Pac Man

QUOTE OF THE DAY

“My Mama says that alligators are ornery because they got all them teeth and no toothbrush.”
—Bobby Boucher

FUN FACT OF THE DAY

The green code in The Matrix was actually created from symbols in the code designer’s wife’s sushi cookbook.

LESS FUN FACT OF THE DAY

A mash-up of two words to make a new word (such as breakfast and lunch into brunch, or motel from motor and hotel) is called a portman-teau. In case you’re wondering, the word “portmanteau” itself is not a portmanteau; it’s a compound word that refers to a duel-sided suitcase.

THE SURVIVING BEATLES TO REUNITE IN BUCKEYE

In a stunning announcement, Paul McCartney and Ringo Starr have announced their plans to play one last show in the Buckeye State along with Post Malone, Shakira, Lil Nas X, Snoop Dogg, Kacey Musgraves, and The Wiggles.

The stars picked the state after learning about the well manicured grass surrounding the state office building and the high quality vegan chocolate cupcakes available in the state cafeteria.

There's only one catch—they need a stadium big enough to hold the “unlimited stardpower of this once a millennium show”. It also needs to be funded by the close of business on June 17th.

The state's largest current stadium in the state holds 42,000 spectators and is dated by today's high technical needs for a world class concert.

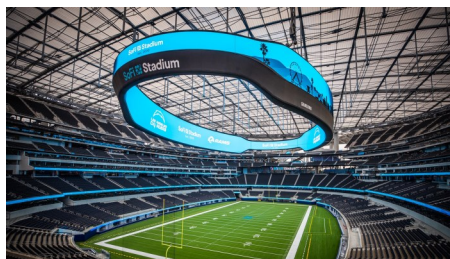

“What is this? A stadium for ANTS” yelled producer Derek Zoolander when he learned about the current stadium. “The stadium would need to be at least... 3x this big!”

Can it happen? I guess that's up to the governor and the state agencies.

But until then, ob-la-di, life goes on.

For those unfamiliar, the Beatles were like your grandparent's Drake, but more British

Recently opened SoFi Stadium in LA has a full LED roof, a two-sided infinity video board, a champagne bar, and a $5 Billion price tag to go with it

28 YEAR-OLD ACCUSED OF ATTENDING BBS THIS YEAR

A 28-year-old man who enrolled at a Buckeye high school and posed as a 17-year-old student to attend Buckeye Boys State for the second time have been arrested along with his mother, authorities said Friday.

“It was fun the first time around—why not do it again when I know the shortcuts?” said Aaron Carpender through his attorney Trenton Haack. “I don't see the big deal.”

Mr. Carpender is suspected of attending Bishop High School for the past two years and blending in as he played Water Polo and oboe in the marching band and starring in a one-man revival of the Lerner & Lowe classic Camelot. This was all a cover for the goal of coming back to BBS.

But how did he have the time? Mr. Carpender has been fired from every job he's ever held for being, well, totally insufferable.

“The school system will enhance processes to determine the authenticity of enrollment documents for current and future students as well as modify policy and procedures as warranted,” the school system said in a statement late Friday.

(Wasn't this a movie? Yeah, the girl from ET was in it. It was mid)

OTHER NEWS:

- New TikTok Fad Endangers Mammals—How Can We Get Kids to Stop Heaving Hedgehogs?
- Consultants Call for Ohio Colleges to Create “Out-of-County” Tuition Rates to Increase Revenue
- Brown Rice and Quinoa = How Many Days In a Row Can You Safely Eat It?
- In Response to Rumored Protests in the Buckeye State, MGK to Change Name to “Neif Projectile Emitting Kelly”
- 404: Headline Not Found
- OPINION: Let's Stop Worrying About if He Could and Stop and Ask Why in the World a Woodchuck Would Have a Need to Chuck Wood

STOCKS

PARENTS	▲
WORK HOURS	▼
CLEANING	▲
LOTTO WINNINGS	▼
CUPCAKES	▼
AWARDS	▲
PACKING	▲

THANK YOU

Thanks for reading and having fun with the stories this week. Happy senior year!

-The Publisher